

Dear Editor:

This year's prize-winning Olympus BioScapes images and videos of life science subjects, along with additional press information, are now available for your use!

All of these images are copyrighted, but we are delighted to be able to offer you the use of them for bona fide editorial purposes. Please contact us if you want to use the images; permission usually only take a quick email. In many cases, we also have larger image files available for your use. (Note that any commercial or other non-editorial use must be approved by Olympus on a case-by-case basis in advance; please email us for approvals.)

All images must be credited with at least the following information: the name of photographer, and the fact that the image was an honoree in the 2012 Olympus BioScapes Digital Imaging Competition®. Additional caption information and thumbnails of each image are included in a separate document called "Olympus BioScapes 2012 Media Guide with Images and Captions."

If you'd like to see the images and movies at full screen size, please view them in the Winners' Gallery at www.olympusbioscapes.com.

Please let us know if you have any questions or would like to learn more about the images, photographers or the competition itself. We have lots of additional information and look forward to hearing from you.

A little background on Olympus BioScapes: it is the world's foremost forum for honoring life science images and movies captured through light microscopes. The competition focuses on the fascinating stories behind the images - stories about the important work going on in laboratories around the world. We hope you enjoy these outstanding images.

Thank you!
